DETAILED ACTION

Information Disclosure Statement

The information disclosure statement filed 9/21/2006 fails to comply with 37 CFR 1.97(c) because it lacks a statement as specified in 37 CFR 1.97(e). It has been placed in the application file, but the information referred to therein has not been considered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Brotz (US 5,213,338) in view of Park et al (WO 01/07128 A1).

Brotz discloses a method of playing a game for two players (Abstract) comprising providing the two players each with a sensor (Fig. 2) for measuring brain wave intensity (4:6-35). The playing area is rectangular and the two players are seated opposite each other at the short sides of the playing area trying to move an illuminated square from their own side of the playing area to the other side (7:9-22). Whichever players move the square to his side of the playing area first wins.

Brotz does not disclose moving the square with respect to the brain wave frequencies of the players; however, Park et al disclose a method for playing a game in which the player is provided with a sensor for measuring brain waves and the players affect the game by changing the frequencies of their brain waves (i.e. theta, alpha, and beta wave frequencies) (Page 3, lines 2-8). Brotz and Park et al are analogous art because they both disclose controlling a game using player's brain waves. At the time of invention a person of ordinary skill in the art would have found it obvious to try to use brain wave frequencies instead of brain wave intensity to move the unit on the playing area, since no unexpected technical effect or result has been achieved by using frequency instead of intensity and it appears that the invention would perform equally well with using brain wave intensity instead of frequency.

Brotz and Park et al discloses the claimed invention except for designating which range of frequency moves the ball towards a designated direction. It would have been an obvious matter of design choice to designate which range of frequency moves the ball towards a designated direction, since applicant has not disclosed that doing so solves any stated problem or is for any particular purpose other than moving the ball's direction.

Examiner's Note: Examiner has cited particular paragraphs, figures, columns and line numbers in the references as applied to the claims above for the convenience of the applicant. Although the specified citations are representative of the teachings in the art and are applied to the specific limitations within the individual claim, other passages and figures may apply as well. It is respectfully requested from the applicant, in preparing the responses, to fully consider the references in entirety as potentially teaching all or part of the claimed invention, as well as the context of the passage as taught by the prior art or disclosed by the examiner.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Please see attached USPTO form PTO-892.
